

The Oak Oracle

'play', using it as a lens for creativity and expression.

What a fantastic first half-term we've had in Oak Class! Everyone has worked super hard and it's been truly inspiring to see how much effort each child has put in.

In Maths, we dove into place value, prime numbers, division, multiplication, and fractions. The children enjoyed learning through fun games and exploring different models like arrays to find what works best for them. Applying concepts to real-life contexts has allowed children to understand how maths will help them beyond school.

In English, our literary journey was enriched by Michael Morpurgo's storytelling. Starting with 'Kasper, Prince of Cats,' we explored both fiction and non-fiction, crafting our imaginative non-fiction newspaper articles as if we were living in 1912! Following this, we ventured into 'Beowulf,' analysing heroic legends and figurative language, which helped develop their appreciation for literature.

As part of National Poetry Day, we explored a variety of poetic forms through the theme of

In History, our focus on the Titanic provided an engaging look into one of the most significant maritime disasters. We investigated the causes and consequences of the incident, and our trip to the SeaCity Museum in Southampton deepened our understanding by viewing artefacts and exhibitions related to the Titanic, making history feel real.

In RE, we explored 'power' and discussed its relevance within family structures, school dynamics, and government systems. We connected these ideas to Christianity and Islam, fostering respectful dialogue between the two religions.

In Music,
we have had the pleasure
of using our outdoor

environment to explore sounds.
Oak class created sound trails and created percussion songs using only their bodies. This culminated in us creating our own musical objects out of recycled objects.

All in all, it's been an incredible half-term filled with knowledge and curiosity! We can't wait to see what the next half-term has in store for us in Oak Class!
